Young children can mistake products containing marijuana for food, drinks or candy. Keep kids safe with these steps:

- Store your products up, away and out of sight so children can’t get to them.
- Put marijuana away every time—even if you think you’ll use it again soon.
- Keep your products in child-resistant containers. Even young children can open products.

Lock it up!
Purchase a medication lock box at www.lockmed.com.

If you think your child consumed marijuana, call the Washington Poison Center hotline: (800) 222-1222

If someone you know needs help, call the Washington Recovery help line: (866) 789-1511
Parents: Start the conversation early, and keep it going through the years.

Tell your younger child not to eat or drink something without your permission.

Let them know marijuana affects their health. It can damage their brain and get in the way of reaching their goals.

Remind your child they can count on you and talk to you.
